If you send us information about yourself, including a CV, in relation to employment with CBC we will at all times handle and store your personal data in accordance with industry good practice for technical and cyber security controls.

Where you are paying fees online the personal data relating to the payment mechanism is collected and processed by a third party. If you use our email link to contact us, we do not need any additional personal data from you other than your contact details as part of your message.

Where we use contact details for marketing purposes it is done in compliance with the Privacy and Electronic Communications Regulations 2003.

We will retain any data you provide in line with our legal requirements

3. Sharing Your Personal Data With Third Parties

We may share your personal data with third parties involved in your building project as necessary to provide you with the service you have contracted with us.

We do not share your personal data with organisations outside of the United Kingdom.

4. Your Legal Rights Under Data Protection Legislation

Data protection legislation in the United Kingdom gives you strong rights in relation to the processing of your personal data. The key ones for the services that we offer and the personal data that you choose to provide to us through our website are the rights to:

1. access the personal data that we are processing.
2. have any personal we are processing corrected if it is out of date or inaccurate.
3. object to processing your personal data.
4. the erasure of your personal data.

If you wish to exercise any of your legal rights, you should contact our data protection lead Practice Manager via karolina@completebuildingcontrol.co.uk

5. Our Cookie Policy

Collecting information online with cookies:

Our website uses cookies and other technologies to store and manage customer preferences, operate content on the website, utilise targeted advertising, and gather analytics. This is standard across websites and apps that also gather data about their customers' online activities on websites, online applications or other such services. We provide more information about how we use cookies and technologies and how you can control them below.

Explaining cookies;

Cookies are small text files that are situated on computers and other such devices, their function is to establish users or devices and to gather data. Cookies can be defined by placing them into one of four different categories, this is based on what their purpose is and what they do to achieve this purpose:

1. Strictly necessary cookies
2. Performance cookies
3. Functional cookies
4. Cookies for marketing purposes.

Strictly necessary cookies:

These are the foundations of a website. They are what allow you to use a website's basic features and navigate around a website. If these cookies were not active, the services you ask for can't be provided.

Performance cookies:

These are cookies that assemble data about how you and other users are using our website. For example, the information collected includes the domain name of the website you have previously visited and the average duration of your visit. These cookies are not for collecting data that uniquely identifies you and only collates mass and anonymous data.

Functionality cookies:

These remember choices you have made on the website. They can also be used to remember how you have changed customisable options on the site, like text size and fonts. They can also provide the services you have requested, like sending us a contact form. This data can be anonymised, and it cannot be used to track how your browser is used on other websites.

Targeting and advertising cookies:

These are the cookies that are used to observe trends in your browsing and offer interest-based target advertising. They can also reduce the amount an ad is shown to you and can ascertain certain ad campaigns' levels of effectiveness. These can be put in place by marketing networks with the website operator's permission. They remember visiting websites and sharing this data with other organisations, like advertisers.

The cookies we use;

Google Analytics is used to analyse various statistics such as page use, interactions and website paths, this is in the pursuit of assessing and improving our website. These are 'digital analytics'. Particular data might also be recorded when users provide it after online forms are filled out. You can opt out of this via Google Analytics or by using Google's add-on: <https://tools.google.com/dlpage/gaoptout>.

Your control over cookies;

You can control and change website cookies in your own browser settings, and you can change these settings when you would like. You can accept, reject, or delete cookies at your own convenience. If you do choose to alter your settings, certain features may not work as they were originally intended. All browser settings are slightly different in some way or another, and so when organising cookies, you should use the relevant settings in your Browser.
